

Deregulation put into effect in the 1980s has already allowed giant multinational corporations to squeeze out smaller businesses. When fewer people are able to run their own businesses, the economy and American morale suffer. When fewer people have access to outlets of free speech, democracy suffers.

While this proposed rule change may fill the pockets of a few extremely wealthy corporations, and fill the coffers of the politicians they have bought, it will be a huge blow to the American way of life.
